Mr. Harrison. Mr. Harrison need not felicitate himself upon the triumph over his party which he gained at Minneapolis on the representative of the force bill. His devotion to the negroes was the same thing bill. The negroes stood by him as their to secure the votes of the negro delegates to Hannison, the office-holders of the whole country scemed to take upon themselves the work of nominating him. The greatest leaders the Republican party ever had went down at once under the assaults of the army of office-holders. Great is the power of pelf. Imlieve in and resort to the politician's tricks. He cannot rouse the enthusiasm of even his own partisans. We need not speculate here as to Third-party candilates and all that sort of thing, for the Democrats have so large a majority of se delegations in the present House of Representatives, which would elect the President if the people failed to do so, that they need not fear their opponents will intentionally throw the election into that body. On the contrary, it will be to the interest of the Republicaus to see to it that the election of President is not turned over to the House of Representatives.
